GCPF Project

On November 8, 2006, the Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission (commission) awarded a GCPF grant of $4,000 for statewide training on the interaction between railroad signals and traffic signals, commonly known as preemption. The training was conducted on May 1, 2007, at BNSF Railway headquarters in Seattle, Washington.

On June 25, 2007, WSDOT submitted a request for reimbursement for work pursuant to commission order. Commission staff attended the training and verified that it was consistent with the training outlined in the grant application and completed according to the specifications outlined in the order approving the grant.
