CenturyLink's Supplemental Response to

Public Counsel DR No. PC-3

Date: March 20, 2018

PC-3 RE: Staff Investigation Report at 6.

The Staff Investigation Report contains the following statement by CenturyLink: "This customer is a CenturyLink Retiree. He moved into what we call a no serve housing development."

Please respond to the following:

- a. Please identify the "no serve housing developments" located within CenturyLink's service territory. In doing so, please place the information in an Excel spreadsheet with rows numbered. Identify the location of each "no serve housing development" by county, city, and boundary streets.

Response: Please see Attachment PC-3 which will be provided on March 20, 2018. Boundary streets are not available. This list is what is currently reflected in CenturyLink's records. However, it may not (and likely does not) reflect all developments where CenturyLink does not have facilities. For example, if a developer does not contact CenturyLink to request service, CenturyLink may not be aware of the development, in which case it would not appear in the records.

- b. Please identify how many housing units are located in each "no serve housing development" identified in (a) above. Please include this information on the spreadsheet developed in response to (a) above.

Response: Please see Attachment PC-3.

- c. Please state whether other telecommunication service providers serve the "no service housing developments" identified in (a) above. If answering yes, please provide the names of the other service providers and the type of service(s) offered. Please include this information on the spreadsheet developed in response to (a) above.

Response: The Commission has determined that basic local exchange services are subject to effective competition and that CenturyLink should be treated (with limited exceptions not relevant here) as a competitively classified company. Docket No. UT-130477, Order No. 03. As such, consumers in the state of Washington have choices for obtaining basic local service, including using a mobile device, via a cable company's voice product, or via an internet connection to enable a Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) connection. The internet connection may be either a cable connection or a satellite connection. The market is competitive, and it is CenturyLink's general experience that developers invite at least one wired connection in a development, and if it is not CenturyLink, then it is likely a cable company. Thus, CenturyLink believes that in the no serve housing developments consumers have options to obtain voice service.

- d. Please state whether CenturyLink's "no service housing developments" policy applies to only residential developments, or whether this or a similar policy with respect to business developments. If CenturyLink has a "no serve" policy for business developments, please describe the policy with particularity.

Response: CenturyLink objects to this data request as it asks for information outside the scope of this proceeding. This proceeding addresses the applicability of the line extension rule to requests for residential basic local exchange service in a development.

The line extension rule by its own terms is limited to requests for residential service. Under WAC 480-120-071(2) "Extension of service" means an extension of company distribution plant for new residential basic local exchange service to a location where no distribution plant of the extending company exists at the time an extension of service is requested. An extension is constructed at the request of one or more applicants for service. Extensions of service do not include trenches, conduits, or other support structure for placement of company-provided facilities from the applicant's property line to the premises to be served. Extension of service, as defined in this rule, does not apply to extensions of service to developments or to extensions of service for temporary occupancy or temporary service (emphasis added).

Without waiver of this objection CenturyLink states that per the information provided in Attachment PC-4, the policy under discussion in this case pertains to developments that would be served under a PAHD (Provisioning Agreement for Housing Developments) and the policy does not apply to business developments. CenturyLink handles requests for service in business developments under other provisions in Section 4 of its terms and conditions (Attachment PC-4).

- e. If CenturyLink answered in the affirmative to (d) above, please identify all "no service" developments affecting business interests located within CenturyLink's service territory. In doing so, please place the information in an Excel spreadsheet with rows numbered. Identify the location of each "no serve" development by county, city, and boundary streets. Identify how many businesses are affected and whether alternate service providers exist. If alternative service providers exist, please identify the providers and type of service(s) offered.

Response: N/A, see the objection in response to "d." above.

Respondent: Phil Grate, CenturyLink Legal
