So it looks like the next logical step is finding a new driller, as it seems Valley Pump only has one and he will be out for awhile if he's going into emergency surgery. Who else can we contact to get this work done? I'm sure Valley Pump would give you your deposit back seeing as they cannot perform the work for us.

The outage did occur when they were were transferring water from the truck to the reservoir.
The Boil Water advisory has been sent to the customers by email.

Hi John.

I know that you are in the midst of coordinating with Mike on recovery of cost for trucking water. I also saw the note that the Valley Pump driller is getting better and may be available soon. Both good news.

I see Dave Sutfin's message below regarding a water outage yesterday. Can you confirm the outage and that a Boil Water Advisory is in place? How was the advisory delivered?

Please call if you'd like to chat.

Please forward to the Echo Glen Water System users.

Dear Echo Glen Water System users:

1. It's important to be aware that we are getting closer to the well rehab. Be cautious with expectations.

2. It's costing $4500/month to truck Water to the reservoir. That's about $100/month per System user.

3. Washington Water Supply will be seeking a surcharge with the UTC to n pay for the imported water.

Conserve-No Water outside the home.

Boil drinking water for 30 minutes and cool to desired temperature. This precautionary. Water testing shows no water quality issues.

Respectfully

Washington Water Supply

Thanks for the heads-up .

Since you have copied system users about pressure, my intent is to seek payment for importing water. It costs about $400/load and we had two loads delivered for about $800.

Conservation of water is critical to maintain pressure and not have outages.
All rate adjustments have to be approved by the State of Washington.
I will provide a comprehensive update tomorrow.

Right, but would it be an emergency if you hadn't supplied water? It seemed like the well couldn't catch up? I guess time will tell this week. Crossing my fingers!

Your thoughts are excellent!

Phone calls to two other drillers resulted in the September/October projections. Since the well is producing enough water to meet basic consumer needs, they don't consider it an emergency. Good thinking/suggestions.

Keep the ideas coming.

I'm just wondering if, given the severity of the situation, the number of individuals impacted, and health and safety concerns of the shuts downs and boil orders, perhaps another company could expedite a drill for us? I get that there's a lot of demand, but this is impacting 43 homes, probably a couple hundred people. Perhaps DOH could help us to find a new vendor? I'dk, just trying to think outside the box. With Valley Pump not sharing any info, we need to assume it's a serious injury that could take a while to heal. A broken bone, or pulled muscles take weeks, if not months to heal. And with medical privacy laws they are under no obligation to tell us what's going on.

I appreciate the work you're doing on this.

A new well driller is out at least three months October, 2023.

The well production hasn't changed. It's operating 24/7.

The thing that did change is the consumption by customers. Outside watering is the cause of previous water outages.

The system will be tested during the warm weather this week.

Thanks for the update. John, are there any alternate companies? If they can't complete the work soon, I still think it seems reasonable for them to return the down payment so you can proceed with the required work in a timely fashion. Other than a small chance of rain on Friday, there's not much relief in the forecast.

How is the well performing over this past weekend?

Thanks,

The well production for the Echo Glen Water System is now down to 5 gallons per minute. This is just barely enough to meet household needs and with our recent warm weather the system is now not able to keep up with user demand.

Today we are out of water.

Is there any way Valley could do the well rehab ASAP?

Good afternoon,

Last year Valley Pump issued a quote for drilling a new well in Maple Valley. We want to perforate the existing casing and not move the existing well casing reducing the potential for well structure failure.

I have attached the well drillers report for your review.

Respectfully,
John Poppe
