

Huey, Lorilyn (UTC)

From: Rachel DeVore (devorera67@gmail.com) Sent You a Personal Message <automail@knowwho.com>
Sent: Tuesday, February 16, 2021 1:31 PM
To: Records Management (UTC)
Subject: Public Comment on Docket # U-200281

Categories: LH

External Email

Dear Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission,

Continuing the moratorium for protection against loss of utilities is the kindest thing that can be done right now. For people that are in dire straits, losing power during the winter could cause the end of their life. Elderly and ill would suffer the hardest. Imagine already feeling helpless because of this pandemic and then being told that you can't even have the basic comfort of heat. Please consider the people that this will affect and not someone's bottom line. Thank you for reading my words. Stay safe and wear a mask.

I am writing to ask the Utilities and Transportation Commission extend the moratorium on utility shut offs until at least September.

It is now clear: the moratorium saves lives. A recent study by the National Bureau of Economic Research showed that the coronavirus infection rates last year were 4.4% lower in communities that banned electricity and water service disconnections during the pandemic, while death rates from the disease were 7.4% lower.

Almost a year into the COVID crisis, it is clearer than ever that the effects of the pandemic are not going away anytime soon. We need to act on people's needs instead of those of profitable utility companies. Right now, up to 2.2 million people in Washington -- almost one-third of the state -- could be struggling to pay for food, according to recent reports. You have the power to ensure that we don't compound their suffering by turning off their electricity, too.

Washington can be a state where everyone -- no matter their race, income, or where they live -- has access to electricity. This is a state where people's health and well being, not corporate profits, can drive policymakers' decisions. Utilities are more essential than ever to keep our communities healthy and safe. Together, we must make sure that Washingtonians can count on essential utilities throughout the pandemic and beyond.

Please, keep the lights on.

Sincerely,

Rachel DeVore
1527 S 41st ST
Tacoma, WA 98418
devorera67@gmail.com
(253) 224-1476

This message was sent by KnowWho, as a service provider, on behalf of an individual associated with Sierra Club. If you need more information, please contact Lillian Miller at Sierra Club at core.help@sierraclub.org or (415) 977-5500.