Terry,
Regular Trash is called Municipal Solid Waste (MSW). MSW is a putrescible waste that is subject to the franchise agreements for the disposal company in your area. MSW is disposed of in a different area of our landfills away from Industrial Process Derived " Special Waste".

For MSW the costs are different being you are charged a set rate by your franchise area provider. For commercial self hauled MSW it is REDACTED per ton (2019 rates). <https://www.cityofpa.us> REDACTED

Waste Management has an approved waste profile #124609OR for Recycle Plant Rejects that is a Direct Landfill Waste profile. This can also be amended to include other industrial derived waste streams like nonhazardous sandblast abrasives or other non-regulated materials generated from facility process operations. Items like paints, asbestos, contaminated soils, etc. need their own individual waste profiles.

Hi Eric - other than the trucking details you describe, how is this waste managed or disposed of differently than the regular plant trash WM picks up?

thank you,
Terry

Amy,
Took me longer to work out trucking details. For the transport portion we are including the tarping of the containers for transport, Managing the loads should they be uneven across the axles, managing over weight loads offsite, movement of off days and off hours as needed due to plant 24 hrs activity, Rail to Landfill. This should cover everything. Attached is the proposal.
