I am against Avista's proposal because of health reasons, higher rates imposed, restricted use imposed if customers use more than the allotted amount. I have read there is the possibility through some tests that have been run that if you're within a certain radius to the meter, it gives off EMPs that can be carcinogenic and cause problems health wise for people if their meter's within a close proximity. Also, possible brown outs and black outs. I have read your electrical power can be turned off if it's determined one is using more than the allotted amount, perhaps during a cold winter and especially during a heat wave where air conditioning is used. I don't like the idea of my electricity being monitored 24/7 on a real-time basis. I don't like that and the reason I don't like that is because that does and will increase rates.
