Advertising and Outreach

Universal Service Advertising

T-Mobile advertised its universal service offerings throughout the calendar year 2012 via media of general distribution, including the use of media such as radio, television, billboards, print, internet, and targeted mailings, among other things. T-Mobile also maintains various retail stores and authorized dealer locations throughout its ETC designated service area through which it advertises its service offerings.

Lifeline Advertising and Outreach

T-Mobile advertised the availability of Lifeline and Link Up services in 2012. Specifically, in 2012, T-Mobile:

- Posted information about its Lifeline offerings on www.usac.org
- Posted information about its Lifeline offerings on the Company's website, www.t-mobile.com, in both English and Spanish
- Advertised the availability of Lifeline through newspapers distributed throughout its designated ETC area, including the following (among others):
 - o Auburn Reporter
 - o The Daily Herald
 - o The Seattle Times
 - o The News Tribune
 - o The Wenatchee World
 - o The Spokesman Review
 - o Tri-City Herald
- Mailed more than 180 poster quality notices to offices where consumers likely to qualify for Lifeline would seek service, including social security and employment offices

An example of the notices that T-Mobile made available to social service agency offices is included as Attachment 1. Attachment 2 includes an example and evidence of T-Mobile's more widely distributed advertising of its Lifeline offering.

Green River awarded $200,000 for SKC College Access Network

Green River Community College has been awarded a grant to launch the South King County College Access Network with a goal to increase college enrollment and completion among South King County students SKC-CAN expects to serve more than 45,000 students in 27 high schools and 25 middle schools in the Auburn. Federal Way, Highline, Kent, Renton and Tukwila school districts.

The two-year, $202,244 grant comes to Green River from the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, SKC-CAN, to be modeled after College Access Network models already at work throughout the country, will work to raise aware ness, enrollment, persis tence and completion in college among South King County students.

"This grant will help us and our network of community partners teach students about the benefits of higher education as a career pathway," said Green River President Dr. Eileen Ely.

Ely pointed out estimates rojecting 67 percent of jobs in the state will require a postsecondary education by 2018, Only 22 percent of the South King County region's students earn college degrees or certificates by the age of 24, with significant drop-offs among low-income students and students of color.

a toy truck, something under the tree this Christmas to call their own.

"The need in our community is really high," said Crystal Goetz, Christian education and family life ministries director at the church, "We never expected to have crowds of people lining up at 5 o'clock in the morning."

Indeed, some of the most determined began their vigil at 11 p.m. Monday. The church was ready for them, handing out numbered bracelets, telling them to go on home, to sleep in their warm beds and to come back in the morning.

Between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m., volunteers inside the church wore themselves out drawing from boxes of toys destined to find honored places under hundreds of trees in homes throughout the area.

The church provided a warming tent in the parking lot and plenty of cookies and hot drinks. Russian, Spanish and Somali interpreters were in the parking lot to translate wishes.

The Marine Corps runs Toys for Tots, collecting the toys and bringing th to distribution centers like the Auburn church and DSHS (Department of Social and Health Services) offices, where they are given as holiday gifts to needy children in the community. For two weeks, Toys for Tots gave away toys throughout King County. As of late Tuesday, more than 15,000 gifts had been distributed for kids throughout the South

The Auburn church oot olved two years ago after DSHS asked if it would be willing to host a distribution.

The unexpectedly high turnout last year caused, Goetz admitted, "a bit of a disaster" - the church didn't participate as a church, it only rented out the space Church officials decided that this time around would be different, that they would really seize a good opportunity to connect with the community and provide what help they could.

"We decided to really make it an event," Goetz said.

Church officials spent four months planning the distribution, working side-by-side with nearby New Day Christian Fellowship.

By 1 p.m. Tuesday, the church had distributed gifts for 1,500 needy children, Auburn veterinarian and volunteer Dr. Don Edwards began handing out bracelets at midnight. He was in the parking lot again at 4:30 a.m and staved there until the distribution was done.

"Twe been handing out tags with numbers so people don't have to wait in line. Everybody seems to be happy, Edwards said.

Edwards asked, "Is everybody happy?"

"Yes," came the crowd's response.
"When somebody with a number comes back and heads straight to the front of the line, nobody says a thing. They all feel that it's an equitable system," said Cheryl Wuench, pastor at First United Methodist Church.

work by August of 2014. and using the new three story building for the 2014 2015 school year."

The new red brick building will face East Main Street.

As soon as the new high school building is finished and occupied, Kenworthy said, the contractor will start knocking down portions of the old high school. During the summer of 2014 and on into 2015, work will center on the connection of the new classroom building with the Performing Arts Center and auto shop. During phase 3 in the summer of 2015 on into 2016, contractors will work on the parking lot and tennis court improvements on the north and northwest portions of the site.

On another matter. Kenworthy said, the district is also starting to look for additional property for another elementary school, probably on the south end of the district.

The "specifically desired location," Kenworthy noted, has not yet been determined.

"We are also looking seriously at the need next year for portable classrooms," Kenworthy said, adding that the recipients of the portables will be the overcrowded Lakeland and Lea Hills elementary schools
