Re: Rulemaking to Consider Rate Setting Flexibility and Competition for Auto Transportation Companies in WAC 480-30, Docket TC-121328

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS:

On September 5, 2012, the Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission (Commission) filed with the Code Reviser a Preproposal Statement of Inquiry (CR-101) to consider rules to establish rate setting flexibility and competition for auto transportation companies in Washington Administrative Code (WAC) 480-30. The Commission filed the CR-101 under Docket TC-121328.

BACKGROUND

Under RCW 81.68, the Commission regulates the fares, routes, services, safety and insurance of auto transportation companies. Auto transportation companies include privately-owned scheduled bus and airporter service.

RCW 81.68.040 allows the Commission to issue a certificate to an auto transportation company if it meets the public convenience and necessity standard. If an incumbent carrier provides service in the territory requested, the Commission may issue a certificate to the applicant after a hearing only if:

- The incumbent company does not object; or
- The Commission determines that the incumbent will not provide service to the satisfaction of the Commission.

Under RCW 81.04.250, the Commission may use “any standard, formula, method, or theory of valuation reasonably calculated to arrive at the objective of prescribing and authorizing just and reasonable rates.”

Over the last several years, the Commission has held extensive discussions with stakeholders about regulation of the auto transportation industry and the appropriate methodology for setting rates. Given that competition among passenger transportation providers may exist in most, if not all, areas of the state, including private cars, taxis, limousines, and public transit, the Commission believes that the current method of strict economic regulation of rates and entry of auto transportation companies may no longer be effective or efficient. Further, the current rate methodology results in numerous tariff filings before the Commission, requiring companies and Commission staff to spend extensive time and resources, where a different, more flexible methodology may reduce the time and expense for both companies and the Commission. Thus, the Commission has determined that it should consider amending WAC 480-30 to promote rate flexibility as well as recognize the competition among carriers.

Draft Rule to Increase Rate Flexibility and Competition

The Commission offers draft rules to promote rate flexibility and recognize increased competition through amendments to WAC 480-30. The Commission is seeking comments from auto transportation companies and other interested parties regarding the draft rules. The draft rules are available for inspection on the Commission’s website at www.utc.wa.gov/121328. If you are unable to access the Commission’s web page and would like a copy of the draft rules mailed to you, please contact the Commission’s Records Center at (360) 664-1234.

The draft rules propose to allow for increased competition by amending existing regulations to: reduce reporting requirements; eliminate some application requirements and clarify others; clarify and narrow the grounds under which a company may object to an application filed by another company; and provide that the Commission will adjudicate all objections under the agency’s brief adjudication process, unless an administrative law judge determines another process is more appropriate. The draft rule also establishes in rule the definition of, and standard for, “public convenience and necessity,” “territory already served by a certificate holder,” “service to the satisfaction of the commission,” and “impact on an existing company.”

The draft rule proposes to increase rate flexibility by authorizing companies to file a tariff that includes the authority to charge rates, at the company’s discretion, in any amount up to a maximum rate. The maximum rate would be set at twenty percent (20%) above the company's "base rate," which is the rate in effect at the time the company files the tariff seeking rate flexibility. The maximum rate would increase by three percent (3%) each year: companies would be required to annually file updated tariffs for reflect the increase.
