RE: Relating to Clean Energy Implementation Plans and Compliance with the Clean Energy Transformation Act, Docket UE-191023
Comments by 637 members of Washington Environmental Council and Washington Conservation Voters

Dear Mr. Johnson:

Washington must continue to lead in planning and responding to the risks and consequences of climate change. The ongoing work to achieve an equitable and impactful implementation of the 2019 Clean Energy Transformation Act (CETA) is a foundational part of our state's response.

The draft rule makes progress in charting a course to 100% clean electricity for Washington by 2045. But the rule needs to go further in ensuring that the utilities are held accountability to achieving an equitable electricity system. I urge you to make the following changes:

- Add that utilities must engage and involve customers and stakeholders, especially from highly impacted and vulnerable communities, by identifying barriers to engagement and contracting with community-based organizations that bring expertise, trusted relationships, cultural and linguistic capacity and input;
- Establish in the rule measurable indicators for vulnerable populations and highly-impacted communities, including health improvements, job training and resilient power;
- Clarify that utilities must evaluate ahead of time the distribution of benefits and burdens by location and population of planned actions;
- Add milestones to meet Clean Energy Standards that provide a way for the UTC to measure progress and ensure vulnerable populations and highly impacted communities receive environmental and non-environmental benefits in the transition;
- Add that utilities must report on indicators and milestones in Biennial CEIP updates, annual clean energy progress reports and clean energy compliance reports to demonstrate compliance with the law; and
- Refine how costs to meet the law are added up to acknowledge the costs of climate change in all scenarios and address historic and current inequities in utility service.

As a Washingtonian, I care deeply about how this law is implemented and that our state is moving towards a cleaner and more equitable system. The rules you write now must chart the course to a clean, safe, fair and resilient electricity for Washington.

Thank you for your efforts,

637 members of Washington Environmental Council and Washington Conservation Voters
