To Whom it May Concern:

It has come to my attention that the Bremerton Kitsap Airporter wants to re-establishing service to Joint Base Lewis McChord (JBLM). This has been a sorely missed service by innumerable service members who need to report to their new units of assignment on JBLM. Currently, their only option is a taxi, Uber or Lyft which carries greater cost than a shuttle service.

The USO Sea-Tac Center is a touchpoint for many of these travelers and they constantly ask about shuttle service to JBLM. It is a much-needed service that will provide a great benefit once it is operational again.

Kindest Regards,

With the increase of personal air travel Joint Base Lewis-McChord (JBLM) personnel are in desperate need for a group service provider to and from the SEATAC airport. Response to these civilian providers of transport in the past to and from points in Lacey (Thurston County), Dupont, Lakewood and Joint-Base Lewis-McChord (Pierce County) where the majority for JBLM personnel reside and the SETAC airport has historically been well received.

Mr. Green/Ms. Pollard,

I am writing to you from the Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission, a state regulatory agency that deals with, amongst many other things, passenger transportation companies within the state. I got your contact information from Kent Tabor's automatic email response. Mr. Tabor provided a support statement to an auto transportation company – Bremerton-Kitsap Airporter – which has applied for an extension of authority that involves service on JBLM. I understand that Mr. Tabor has since moved on and I was hoping if you could review the statement that he had provided the applicant and confirm if the need for service as described by Mr. Tabor is still necessary. A response to this email affirming as much, or a new support statement from a current base transportation officer would suffice.

Thank you for attention in this matter.
