Subject:	Announcing CenturyLink and Qwest merger - April 1, 2011

CenturyLink and Qwest have merged to become the third largest telecommunications company in the United States and after a transition period, will operate under the CenturyLink name and brand in its wholesale markets.

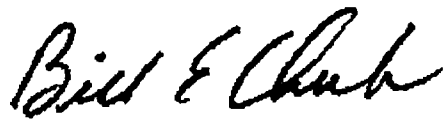

The combined company has the experience and expertise necessary to provide our wholesale customers with strategic and customized product and service solutions. Providing you with high-quality wholesale service is a priority at CenturyLink.

CenturyLink made numerous commitments to provide certainty and stability for our wholesale customers including commitments regarding agreement extensions, rate stabilization and Operational Support Systems. From a combined company and wholesale customer perspective, CenturyLink plans to continue operating both CenturyLink OSS in CenturyLink service areas and Qwest OSS in Qwest service areas until it completes its evaluation of the best options for customers.

The merger has created a company with financial strength, national breadth and local depth providing fiber connectivity and other high bandwidth services as well as a high capacity 180,000 route-mile fiber network that spans the United States from coast to coast. With a network backbone that will soon be capable of up to 100 Gbps, the network enables businesses to run bandwidth-intensive applications without decreases in security, quality or performance.

We remain committed to serving our wholesale customers and look forward to working with you now and in the future. Together...We are Stronger Connected.

Sincerely,
