Hi,

I work at a commercial yoga space in Bellevue, WA where I see clients regularly. I was recently informed that 'smart' radio frequency meters will be installed, and that commercial spaces cannot opt out. I strongly feel that commercial customers should also have an individual choice to opt out of getting these upgraded meters. People spend a lot of time at their workspace, sometimes the same amount as they spend at home, and they should have the option to feel safe at work.

I teach pregnant women in this commercial space weekly, and my young daughter attends classes here regularly as well. Both children and pregnant women are sensitive populations whose radio frequency exposure limits have not been tested; I want to continue to see clients in, and bring my daughter to, an electromagnetically safe space. Elderly people come to this space and they should be considered as well.

These meters have NOT been UL tested and have been measured at levels much higher than safety levels in other industrialized countries. For the same ethical reasons that PSE has chosen to allow customers an opt out on the individual level, I strongly urge you to allow this on the commercial level.

I have other issues with these meters as well in terms of billing issues an invasion of privacy.

Please confirm that you have received my email by responding to this email.
Please let me know if there is another person I need to speak to in order to voice these concerns. Would Ms. Feeser be the correct person to contact under Consumer Protection?

Thank you for your consideration and time.

Sincerely,
Angelica Rose
