

Dear Puget Sound Energy CEO Kimberly Hartzel

Thank you for your work to commit Puget Sound Energy to 15% wind energy & retiring the two dirtiest boilers of the Colstrip coal power plant. These are bold steps towards protecting our common home from the worsening effects of climate change.

I believe we can, and must, do more.

I like you, am a transplant to the Puget Sound region. I moved to Seattle from New Mexico four years ago, while the rural community I lived in struggled against a long, terrible drought. While Washington will never look like New Mexico, the state risks a dire condition, if we cannot get a handle on carbon ~~emissions~~ emissions.

To keep Western Washington the lush, green place we chose to live in, I urge you to cut ties completely with the Colstrip plant and commit to 100% green energy by 2024.

Sincerely,

Louis McGill
