Dear Ms. Harris,

No one deserves to inherit a broken world. We are at a critical point in our struggle with the climate crisis. The continuation of fossil fuels burning further condemns our future and our children's.

As a young person, I am very concerned about the many damaging effects of climate change such as ocean acidification and global warming. I have the rest of my life ahead of me but I am already concerned about what kind of world we will leave for our children.

Seattle (and the rest of Washington) are ideal candidates for clean energy sources such as solar and wind.

While Puget Sound Energy has committed to closing 2 boilers at the Colstrip plant, this will not be enough. We cannot continue to pollute our world and ruin the future of our children.

As a PSE customer, I am very concerned about the idea that PSE will continue to make poor decisions such as ignoring the obvious choice to switch

Sincerely,

Allen Jay
