Hello. I am writing to you to appeal to your common sense and professional business role. As a first time visitor to the beautiful (but congested) Seattle area, I was disappointed to learn that the Colstrip power plant in Montana may yet have a projected (and protected) life span of more than 12 years. As a student and proponent of climate change education, I am ever more aware of the damage coal-fired power does to our precious environment.

In Australia, our Great Barrier Reef is at risk of dying, while our foolish government sells more coal overseas.

My impression of Washington state is that your citizens are passionate about doing the right thing to protect what you have. Hopefully you feel the same and will not prolong the life of this out-dated power station by signing a new contract

for coal.

the climate crisis is real and coal is a
major culprit.

What do you want as
your legacy?

I act for my children,
and perhaps yours.

Regards,
