Major Event – Qualification Summary
IEEE1 Standard 1366

IEEE Standard 1366 was established to present a set of terms and definitions which can be used to foster uniformity in the development of electric system service reliability indices, to identify factors which affect the indices, and to aid in consistent reporting practices among utilities. Also, it provides guidance for new personnel in the reliability area and tools for internal as well as external comparisons. The Major Event Day definition was created as part of IEEE Standard 1366 to allow for consistent calculation of reliability metrics between utilities and enable more valid comparisons with other utility reliability metrics.

Event Restoration – YTD Cost Summary

Starting from the 2018 calendar year, PSE continues its existing Qualifying Storm Loss Deferral Mechanism for any storm restoration costs incurred on or after January 1, 2018, with the following modifications that were agreed to in settlement and the settlement was approved by the Commission in PSE's 2017 general rate case:

- (i) the cumulative annual cost threshold for deferral of storms under the Qualifying Storm Loss Deferral Mechanism shall be increased from $8 million to $10 million,
- (ii) qualifying events that cost less than $500,000 will not qualify for deferral, and
- (iii) the cumulative annual cost threshold for the Qualifying Storm Loss Deferral Mechanism shall exclude storm events with costs less than $500,000.

Media & Communication CoverageExtratropical Cyclone Whips Over the Pacific Northwest

*NASA Earth Observatory image by Lauren Dauphin, using VIIRS data from NASA EOSDIS LANCE, GIBS/Worldview, and the Joint Polar Satellite System (JPSS).

A strong extratropical cyclone hit the Pacific Northwest on November 19, 2024, bringing damaging winds and rain to the region. The storm knocked over trees and left nearly 600,000 people without power in Washington state on November 20, according to news reports.

This image shows the storm system at 1:50 p.m. Pacific Time (21:50 p.m. Universal Time) on November 19. Extra-tropical cyclones are large rotating weather systems that occur in the midlatitudes (generally more than 30° latitude away from the equator). Mature extratropical cyclones like this often feature comma-shaped cloud patterns that are the product of “conveyor belt” circulation. Heavy precipitation is often present near the low-pressure head of the comma. This image was captured by the VIIRS (Visible Infrared Imaging Radiometer Suite) on the NOAA-20 satellite.

On the evening of November 19, the storm’s central pressure dropped to levels on par with a storm in October 2021, which saw the lowest pressure in about 50 years of records for that region, according to Chris Dolce, a meteorologist at The Weather Channel. The pace of the storm’s intensification was more than double the criteria for bombogenesis—a popular term that describes a midlatitude cyclone that rapidly intensifies into a “bomb cyclone.”

The plunging atmospheric pressure in the center of the storm caused winds to increase quickly on November 19. The National Weather Service in Seattle reported wind gusts of up to 77 miles (124 kilometers) per hour in the mountains southeast of Seattle.

At least 1 dead and hundreds of thousands without power as bomb cyclone slams Washington state, British Columbia

A “once in a decade” bomb cyclone lashed the northwest United States and parts of Canada early Wednesday with hurricane-force wind gusts — leaving at least one person dead and hundreds of thousands without power across Washington state, California and British Columbia.

In Seattle and neighboring cities, strong winds are tumbling trees, with some falling on houses and placing lives at risk.

In Lynnwood, north of Seattle, a woman in her 50s was killed when a large tree fell on a homeless encampment shortly after 7 p.m. PT, South County Fire Department told CNN.

More than 650,000 customers lost power in the early hours of Wednesday in Washington, while about 140,000 customers were without power in British Columbia, BC Hydro reported on its website. As of midnight PT, over 24,000 customers in California were without power.

The National Weather Service has reported notable wind gusts across the region, including off the coast of British Columbia, where winds were blowing at 101 mph at the South Brooks Buoy.

Gusts of 72 to 77 mph were recorded in Washington state, including at Cape Elizabeth on the Olympic Peninsula and at Crystal Mountain and Sunrise-Mount Rainier inland southeast of Seattle.

“It’s severe out there. Trees are coming down all over the city, with multiple falling onto homes,” the fire department in Bellevue, east of Seattle, posted in a Severe Weather Safety alert on Facebook. “If you are able, head to the lowest floor you can and stay away from windows. Do not go outside if you can avoid it.”

Videos obtained by CNN show multiple fallen trees on power lines in Lake Stevens, Snohomish County, north of Seattle, with Snohomish Regional Fire and Rescue saying that there are “many trees and power

In Maple Valley, a city southeast of Seattle, two people were rescued after a tree fell on their trailer, according to Puget Sound Fire. One patient was freed quickly, while it took firefighters an hour to extricate the second. Both patients were transferred to a nearby hospital. An Amtrak train collided with a fallen tree near an intersection in Stanwood, north of Seattle on Tuesday night, according to CNN affiliate KIRO. The incident left the train inoperable, though none of the 47 passengers on board sustained injuries, KIRO reported. CNN reached out to Amtrak for more information.

Several school districts in western Washington will be closed or delayed on Wednesday due to the impact of the storm.

The powerful “bomb cyclone” will combine with an atmospheric river to unleash over a month’s worth of rain, hurricane-force wind gusts and feet of mountain snow to parts of the Pacific Northwest and Northern California.

The storm system rapidly intensified on Tuesday in a phenomenon called “bombogenesis” and earned it the moniker of “bomb cyclone.” This was one of the most intense on record for its location, a storm that occurs only “about once every ten years,” the National Weather Service in Medford, Oregon, said.

Bomb cyclones are formidable and unload heavy snow and strong winds during the winter.

This bomb cyclone will work with an atmospheric river, a long plume of water vapor moving like a river through the atmosphere, to wring out heavy rainfall and significant mountain snowfall in the Pacific Northwest and Northern California. The pair will stall along the coast and hammer the area with hazardous conditions through the week and into the weekend.

Heavy snowfall is expected across higher elevation areas, where winter weather alerts are in place. Blizzard warnings are in effect across parts of the Washington Cascades, where snowfall over a foot and gusts of up to 60 mph are possible through Wednesday morning.

“Travel could be very difficult to impossible. Strong winds could cause extensive damage to trees and power lines,” the National Weather Service office in Seattle warned.

One to 4 feet of snow is possible through Wednesday across the Cascades and the northern Sierra Nevada. Snowfall could create impossible travel conditions on Interstate 5 and Highways 31, 36, 66, 89, 97 and 140.

Powerful winds peaked Tuesday for much of the Pacific Northwest as the bomb cyclone began to weaken, but conditions will remain gusty across the region Wednesday.

More than 600,000 lose power from bomb cyclone in Western Washington

Nov. 20, 2024 Updated Wed., Nov. 20, 2024 at 7:12 a.m.

Hours after a massive windstorm howled with gusts up to 74 mph in the lowlands, crews in Western Washington were working Wednesday to restore electricity for over 640,000 customers who lost power overnight.

At least one person died, when wind toppled a tree at a Lynnwood homeless encampment Tuesday night.

A rotating rapidly intensifying system of storms, known as a bomb cyclone, skirted the West Coast and churned about 300 miles west of the Olympic Peninsula. Its strength was expected to wane Wednesday, though a sequel system could move in Thursday or Friday, according to the National Weather Service.

Over 400,000 people of those without power were Puget Sound Energy customers, outside the city of Seattle. Heavy snow, fallen trees and — on Interstate 90 near Snoqualmie Pass — a jackknifed semitruck blocked routes in the immediate aftermath of the storm. Some flights at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport were also rerouted when the storm was near its peak.

After peaking at 1 a.m., winds significantly dropped off by 4 a.m., according to the National Weather Service.

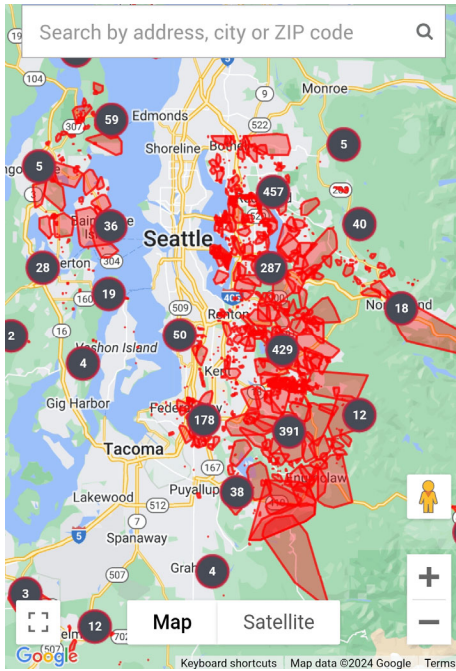

All wind warnings and advisories have ended, the weather service said.

Damage from fallen trees and downed wires was reported throughout the region. The easterly winds are in the opposite direction of usual high winds, making it easier to knock down trees, said weather service meteorologist Dana Felton.

“The trees are ready to defend against southwesterly winds, not so much easterly,” he said. The strongest gusts reached 74 mph in Enumclaw, and the Seattle area saw gusts between 45 to 55 mph.

Parts of the North Cascades including Stevens Pass and the town of Roslyn and Easton are under a blizzard warning through 10 a.m. Wednesday, with blizzard conditions expected at or above elevations higher than 2,000 to 2,500 feet.

Power outages

More than a half-million customers in the region were without power for most of Tuesday night.

As of 1 a.m. Wednesday, more than 474,000 Puget Sound Energy were in the dark, and by 5:40 a.m., crews had managed to lower the number to 416,000.

Seattle City Light reported 112,600 customers without power late Tuesday, though that dropped to about 70,300 by 5:40 a.m. Wednesday.

Crews with the Snohomish County Public Utility District were also working to get customers back online. Outages dropped from 115,200 late Tuesday to 74,159 by 5:44 a.m. Wednesday.

Estimated time of restoration for PSE customers was largely listed as “to be determined,” but was described as an outage that would last days. Snohomish PUD said it was unable to provide a timeline, but said it may take “multiple days” to restore power. Estimated restoration times will be updated on outage maps as they become available.
