

----- Forwarded by Lynda Johnson/WUTC on 03/07/2006 09:19 AM ----- jeffgmiles@earthlink.net
11/03/2005 07:01 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

I am one of Sprint's assets you brag about, too bad you make us pay for Sprint's mistakes. I have given this company 27 years of service and all the company does is downgrade our benefits. No wonder some your employees are on strike! What's next?, your dad died?, take a personal day! If the top end was not so bloated and overpaid, and some of the expensive bad "programs" were not pushed on employees, maybe this company could run and perform better. There are people who think they are making sound decisions that have no clue what the impact on the front line workers or customers will be. The employees and the customers money built Sprint, now we are being tossed aside. Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Jeff Miles

P.O. Box 1629

Zillah, Washington 98953

cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/02/2005 08:46 AM -----

beckmi@msn.com
11/01/2005 07:22
To PM sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers
Deserve Better
CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Marsha Beck
10023 North Quinault Court
Spokane, Washington 99208-9320
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/02/2005 08:46 AM -----

DSLARSEN@ESKIMO.COM

11/01/2005 07:50 PM

To sbate@wutc.wa.gov

cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

DAVID LARSEN

18910 Bothell Everett Hwy J2

Apartment 206

Bothell, Washington 98012

cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/02/2005 08:46 AM ----- Addicker@comcast.net
11/02/2005 12:25 AM

To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Andrea Dickerson
6519 95th St. SW Apt #1
Lakewood, Washington 98499
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/02/2005 08:46 AM -----

rdpjones@drizzle.com
11/02/2005 01:00 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Richard D. Jones
817 NW 64th St.
Seattle, Washington 98107-2217
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM -----
katyko@microsoft.com
10/31/2005 09:10 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Katy Koenen
8250 40th Ave. NE
Seattle, Washington 98115
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM -----
mpirouette@olyphen.com
10/31/2005 09:10 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Kathleen Moore
P.O. Box 238
Sequim, Washington 98382
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM -----
jlute@cwa-union.org
10/31/2005 09:13 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Jay Lute
"4174 Lind Avenue SW"
Renton, Washington 98055
cc:Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM -----
john@kosche.org
10/31/2005 09:14 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov

cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

John Kosche
5615 - 43rd. Avenue East
Tacoma, Washington 98443-2410
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM ----- lynda_flightfossil@msn.com
10/31/2005 09:14 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Lynda Parkhurst
36 McKenzie Lane
Port Ludlow, Washington 98365
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM ----- jtboyle@cwa-union.org
10/31/2005 09:15 AM

To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Jay Boyle
7208 Mississippi Drive
Vancouver, Washington 98664
cc:Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM ----- parl0@earthlink.net
10/31/2005 09:23 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Del Strickland
17202 Shantra Ln
Rochester, Washington 98579
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:46 PM ----- wendy.pegelow@metrokc.gov
10/31/2005 09:25 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Wendy Pegelow
7032 82nd Ave. SE
Mercer Island, Washington 98040
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
xophermv@yahoo.com
10/31/2005 09:48 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Christopher Veal
215 100th St SW D202
Everett, Washington 98204
cc:Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
pattyrose@harbornet.com
10/31/2005 09:57 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Patty Rose
3049 South 36th Street, #201
Tacoma, Washington 98409
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
rutherfo@hotmail.com
10/31/2005 10:09 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Dawn Rutherford
4807 S. Orchard
Seattle, Washington 98118
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- ulricd@yahoo.com
10/31/2005 10:15 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Ulric Dihle
1616 N 49th St
Seattle, Washington 98103
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
erinmydear@comcast.net
10/31/2005 10:23 A.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

As a Sprint customer, I am considering changing my cellular service provider due to these developments.

Sincerely,

ERIN WALTERS
19324 3rd Ave So
Seattle, Washington 98148
cc:Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- swafoss@comcast.net
10/31/2005 09:51 A.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

I am a loyal customer of Sprint for many years and am also a Union member who is very concerned with the way you are treating your employees because of your current debt situation. Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Cristina Wenzl
6112 14th Ave. NW Apt. #6
Seattle, Washington 98107-2913
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
sqwrds@aol.com
10/31/2005 10:28 A.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Elan Carlson
216 West 14th Street
Port Angeles, Washington 98362-7724
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
tbrady@teamsters38.org
10/31/2005 10:39 A.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Tammi Brady
2601 Everett Ave
Everett, Washington 98201
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- ranmel@televar.com
10/31/2005 10:40 A.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

melissa mcCool
753 hexon rd
selah, Washington 98942
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
commiett@yahoo.com
10/31/2005 11:15 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Todd Tollefson
1624 Boren #6
Seattle, Washington 98101
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- davidc.yao@comcast.net
10/31/2005 11:31 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

David Yao
1538 N. 128th St.
Seattle, Washington 98133-7700
cc:Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- manteca@hotmail.com
10/31/2005 12:00 P.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Miguel Ramos
3102 Birchwood Ave
Bellingham, Washington 98225
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- beemerwright@msn.com
10/31/2005 12:39 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Ron Wright
4145 Eastwood Dr SE
Port Orchard, Washington 98366-1565
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
vedafa@mindspring.com
10/31/2005 01:10 P.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Veda Shook
1215 N. 50th Street
Seattle, Washington 98103
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
jcrowe@u.washington.edu
10/31/2005 01:41 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Jill Crowe
1925 94th Drive S.E.
Everett, Washington 98205
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- drjohn.shadylady@comcast.net

10/31/2005 02:21 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

John W. Tobin
8905- 118th ave se
Newcastle, Washington 98056
cc:Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
dbarlos@yahoo.com
10/31/2005 05:53 P.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Much Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service is not very good. By demanding HUGE givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

Please meet with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments. I will be contacting them myself.

Sincerely,

David Barlos
9116 E. Sprague #202
Spokane Valley, Washington 99206
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
SEGEBARTTD@MSN.COM
10/31/2005 06:40 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Duane Segebartt
2911 15th St S E
Auburn, Washington 98092
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- tlbarnhill@hotmail.com
10/31/2005 07:40: PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Teresa Barnhill
13806 80th St SE
Snohomish, Washington 98290
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
rhtrex@aol.com
10/31/2005 08:44 P.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Rick Horner
1619 N.202 pl.
Shoreline, Washington 98133-3335
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- howald@foxinternet.com
10/31/2005 09:16 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

William N. Howald
7319 227th St SE
Woodinville, Washington 98072-8323
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- jlnbwash@charter.net
10/31/2005 09:49 P.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Jeff Washburn
5409 Mt Aix Way
Yakima, Washington 98901
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
cvalles@lucent.com
10/31/2005 10:03 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Carlos Valles
200 Milton Way Apt-B
Milton, Washington 98543
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
IAM1040MZSASSY@AOL.COM
11/01/2005 01:22 A.M.
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

DIANE TOMEVI
2632 42ND AVE SW, #201
SEATTLE, Washington 98116
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
cc@tillett.com
11/01/2005 02:38 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc
Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

CYNTHIA TILLET
p.o. box 269
tracyton, Washington 98393-0269
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
ken@drip23.drizzle.com
11/01/2005 04:58 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Kenneth Moffat
2032 S. 301st. St.
Federal Way, Washington 98003
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
APBENDIX@MSN.COM
11/01/2005 07:29 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Pamela Bendix
7161 NE Hidden Cove Rd
Bainbridge Island, Washington 98110
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
hbgreen@verizon.net
11/01/2005 09:52 am
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Holly Green
2009 I Ave.
Anacortes, Washington 98221
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM -----
lisa@seiu925.org
11/01/2005 10:39 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
Cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Lisa Beaulaurier
5015 44th Ave S
Seattle, Washington 98118
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/01/2005 02:45 PM ----- andersonjase@msn.com
11/01/2005 01:51 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Jason Anderson
5107 s hudson st
seattle, Washington 98118
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/03/2005 03:54 PM -----
seattleyoko@gmail.COM
11/01/2005 02:42 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Yoko Kuramoto-Eidsmoe
411 Boylston E.
Seattle, Washington 98102
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/03/2005 03:54 PM -----
hopelovenow@yahoo.com
11/02/2005 01:57 PM
To @wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Robert Jenusaitis
141 Blue Ridge Rd
Port Townsend, Washington 98368
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/03/2005 03:54 PM -----
FIGHTINGMACHINIST@YAHOO.COM
11/02/2005 08:54 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Clayton Bliss
11814 SE 254th ST
Kent, Washington 98030
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/03/2005 03:54 PM -----
amos_annan@yahoo.com
11/02/2005 08:59 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Amos Annan
9116 E Sprague Ave. #138
Spokane Valley, Washington 99206
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/03/2005 03:54 PM -----
skydeesse@aol.com
11/03/2005 07:05 AM

To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

THERESSA SHARPE
1808 Bigelow Ave. N
Seattle, Washington 98109
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/03/2005 03:54 PM -----
zendomar@starband.net
11/03/2005 10:43 AM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Glen & Marlynn Jacobson
2080 Breezy Pt. Rd.
Camano Island, Washington 98282
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/09/2005 05:07 PM -----
sarah@mail.datapro.net
11/05/2005 10:32 am
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

SARAH SHERMAN
2561 Nob Hill Ave N
Seattle, Washington 98109
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/09/2005 05:07 PM ----- beechert@earthlink.net
11/09/2005 11:42
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Edward Beechert
5555 E Evergreen Blvd #210`
Vancouver, Washington 98661
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission

----- Forwarded by Sharyn Bate/WUTC on 11/09/2005 05:07 PM ----- sqwitch@aol.com
11/09/2005 04:48 PM
To sbate@wutc.wa.gov
cc

Subject Sprint's Customers and Workers Deserve Better

CEO Dan Hesse

Dear CEO Hesse,

Sprint's plans for the new company that provides local telephone service to 7.5 million customers are an outrage.

This company is being unfairly saddled with $7.25 billion in debt after Sprint pledged to the Federal Communications Commission earlier this year that there would be an equitable distribution of the overall debt and assets of Sprint.

Clearly, this company is being set up for failure, by transferring this excessive debt to local service and requiring an onerous, one-sided repayment schedule.

These actions are sure to result in higher rates for customers, poor quality service with the new company unable to invest in repairs and upgrades, and an endless wait for customers who want broadband service and other technologies.

The 7.5 million mostly rural customers served by Sprint local telephone service deserve better. They have contributed billions in profits to Sprint -- $6 billion last year alone. Sprint Nextel, after taking customers' money, apparently has decided to abandon their service needs.

Sprint's attitude toward workers who provide quality service isn't any better. Sprint has demanded huge givebacks in health care, disability benefits, retirement security and other benefits that Sprint workers have earned over the years.

I urge you to sit down with Sprint workers to reach a fair contract, and to restructure the enormous debt and repayment plan that you currently expect the new local telephone company to support.

I am certain that state and federal regulators are closely following these developments.

Sincerely,

Morgen S Daily
8201 Beverly Blvd
Everett, Washington 98203
cc: Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission