ST. JOHN CO-OPERATIVE TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY

RULES AND REGULATIONS

17 - Service Conditions

The company may refuse to extend service to new customers that do not have 110 volt electrical service available to the premise for which service is requested. Once service is provided, the customer must maintain 110 volt electrical service to continue to receive service from the company. For existing customers that do not have 110 volt electrical service, the company may choose the most efficient means of providing adequate power for the optical network terminal at the customer's premise at company expense. Once power for the optical network terminal at the customer's premise is established, the customer is responsible for all operational, maintenance and repair costs.
