Robert Friend Weber Whitlock commented on a link Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission shared.

Robert wrote: "Thank you for this. And I think there is still concern about allowing PSE to earn a profit consider the methods of electrical generation have been harmful. Maybe it is not possible to earn a profit fairly when it comes at the expense of others, at the expense of environmental well-being. Take Colstrip for example (though the same is also true for hydro projects that harm waterways.) Colstrip has been a major source of pollution. PSE is a wealthy company. Why can it not afford to operate in a manner that is wholistically sustainable and harmonious with the natural environment? And why should it be rewarded with profits when it is not sustainable and harmonious? What here really, is fair about this. Thank you."
